 This is one more graded course than for the regular English MA; the additional course is taken in the third semester.

*Besides ENMD 8850, students are required to take four other courses in medieval topics (for a total of five). At least two, but no more than three of these courses should be taken in other departments.

_____ Distribution Requirement

1 course in Renaissance

1 course in Criticism or Theory

_____ Place-holder Courses: In your second semester, you must register for ENXX 9910; in your third semester, register for 3 hours of ENGL 8999; in your optional fourth semester, register for 12 hours of ENGL 8999.

_____ Foreign Language Requirement: MA students are required to demonstrate reading proficiency in a foreign language relevant to their course of study. This is normally done by passing a translation exam given by the appropriate language department at the University. My language exam was in _____ (language) and passed on _____.

Or students may fulfill the Masters requirement with undergraduate course work previously taken: a grade of B or better in an intermediate or advanced course. _____ Check here if you have submitted the appropriate transcript and received approval from the Director of Graduate Studies to use an undergraduate course to satisfy this requirement.

_____ MA Final Exercise: Successful completion of one of the following three options (circle your option)

- 1) Write a critical thesis (in your 3rd semester, register for ENGL 8998 as one of your 10 graded courses)
- 2) Write a pedagogical thesis (same as above: ENGL 8998 in your 3rd semester, for course credit)
- 3) Take a one-hour oral exam on a list of readings approved by the appropriate area committee chair
